It [Sandwell] afterwards became the property of the family of Horewood, of Compton and Stourton-castle. Robert Whorwood died 13 Oct. 32 Eliz [1590] (William, his son and heir, being aged 27) seised of the manor of Sandwell, a mill and lands in West Bromwich, Barr, Handsworth and Tipton, held in capite by knight's service and the hundredth part of a knight's fee; which sir William Whorwood, kt. died 1 July, 1614 seised of the same, and Thomas was his son and heir, aged twenty-six. Brome Whorwood, son of Thomas, had his seat here in sir Simon Degge's time. It is now the property of Legge, earl of Dartmouth. The mansion is built on the site of the priory, some of the foundations whereof are yet visible. On the lawn, near the house, is the Well, protected with iron-rails. [ERDESWICK (1844) 393-4]
